

Your SEEK Story Framework

Use this section to build the narrative context for a learning project.

SEEK grounds your learner in meaning before asking for effort.

The Story Foundation

16. What is the name of your learning project — course, program, training, coaching relationship, or curriculum?

Week 3: Story to Web

17. Who is the central character of this story? (The learner themselves, a fictional user, a professional persona, etc.)

My fictional character within the world of Kairova is a medic turned detective named Orion Rosa.

18. What challenge or problem does this character face at the beginning? Be specific and vivid.

Upon leaving the hospital, he was roped into a mysterious, yet deadly case of anonymous criminal slowly infecting witnesses with a slow and painful virus that kills patients as malicious revenge.

19. What does the world look like once this character has successfully completed the learning journey?

Once the case is resolved, the world will interpret him as a hero and savior of humanity withing Kairova.

The Narrative Arc

20. Write a 2-3 sentence story opener you could use to begin your course, session, program, or module. Make it personal and specific.

Orion walks into the reception area leaving the hospital. Suddenly, the ambulance came with a decaying body and the police shows him evidence of a suspect injecting venom onto people.

21. How will you weave this story throughout the material? Describe 2-3 places where the narrative will resurface.

Orion turned his office room at the hospital into a conspiracy board where he and his team link evidence to the suspect's plan. They will explore through the streets, and after linking all the clues together, they will raid the suspect's underground basement to arrest them.
